

Fatih Karanfil

Fatih holds a Habilitation to supervise research (HDR) in Economics from University of Paris Nanterre, a Ph.D. in Economics from University of Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne, an M.A. in Economic Analysis and Modeling from University of Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne and École Centrale Paris, and a B.A. in Economics from Galatasaray University.

He has been a research fellow at KAPSARC since December 2017. He began his career as a researcher at Galatasaray University before moving to the University of Paris Nanterre where he worked as an associate professor of economics. He has also been a researcher at EconomiX-CNRS and an external researcher attached to Galatasaray University Economic Research Center (GIAM).

He has published many articles in the fields of energy and environmental economics, and has supervised M.A. and Ph.D. dissertations. He has been a member of research projects dealing with energy or climate change issues, which have been financed by institutions such as the French Energy Council and the European Renewable Energy Council. Fatih is a regular member of advisory and scientific committees of symposiums or conferences in his field of experience. He also regularly serves as a referee for many international journals and national science foundations.