The Irish Society of New Economists (ISNE) has announced a call for papers for its fifth annual conference. The conference is intended to provide a forum for new economists (in post graduate research programs or private/public sectors) to present papers from any area of economics. This forum is intended for anybody in the early stages of a career in economics - eligibility to present has nothing to do with age. The conference will be held in the National University of Ireland, Galway (NUIG) on Friday 3rd October 2008. Applicants should submit a title and 300-word description of their topic to isne08@gmail.com The closing date is Monday 30th June 2008. All submissions will receive a response by the end of July at the latest. We hope to be in touch as soon after the closing date as possible. Any interested parties that do not have a paper to present, but would like to attend the conference, are very welcome at the event. There are no conference fees to either attend or present at the conference.
